

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method of identifying one or more language regions in the brain of a subject. The method includes presenting to the subject one or more lists of related words to selectively challenge one or more language systems of the brain, and scanning the brain while presenting the one or more lists. This non-surgical method can be used to obtain language maps for patients awaiting neurosurgery.